Lucy Mackay Tumber

Lucy Mackay Tumber graduated from the London School of Osteopathy in 2004, after which she briefly worked in the Chronic Pain Unit within the East Kent Hospitals Trust and from a GP Surgery. She subsequently opened a high street practice, which she later successfully transferred to home.

Lucy takes a broadly structural approach to osteopathy and welcomes a diverse range of patients from children to the elderly. She has worked as a clinic tutor and module leader and is now Director of Clinical Studies at the London School of Osteopathy. She also supervises dissertations at undergraduate level and has assessed at all levels within the degree course.

Lucy has worked as a registration assessor for the GOsC since 2013. She obtained a Postgraduate Certificate in Academic Practice in 2011, a Masters in Education in 2013 and is currently researching for a Doctorate in Education.
