

Patrick Luppi

Patrick was born and raised as bilingual in the north of Italy near the French border. He moved to the UK in 1998 where he graduated with a B.Ost from the University College of Osteopathy (UCO - formerly BSO) in 2007. He currently practises osteopathy in an NHS setting.

Patrick joined the UCO faculty in 2009 where he works as a clinical tutor and lecturer in communication skills, case-history taking, clinical diagnostic reasoning and patient management. A particular area of interest is preparing students for their clinical assessments. He regularly acts as an internal clinical assessor at the UCO and he has a Pg Cert Academic Clinical Education.

Because Patrick speaks four languages, he regularly acts as an external assessor in different French and Italian osteopathic colleges.

In Patrick's previous working life he travelled the world and lived in South America where he worked as a scuba diving instructor. He loves spending time with his family and looking after his two children.
